News Release

York Ag Announces New Territory Sales Representative in the U.S.

York Ag recently recruited Emily Orth as its new Territory Sales Representative to help fuel expansion of poultry applications in the Midwest.

(York, Pa., August 4, 2022) York Ag, a dynamic supplier of holistic ingredient solutions that optimize animal well-being, announces Emily Orth as its new Territory Sales Representative in the U.S. Emily, a Purdue University graduate in Animal Sciences and Production with knowledge of Food and Agribusiness Management, joins York Ag to help fuel the growth in its poultry market. With more than 40 years serving the egg and poultry industries in the U.S., York Ag is growing, thus expanding its commercial team was a natural step to provide superior service and support.

"We are glad to have Emily join our team. She has a solid background in animal sciences, with relevant experience in live operations and management in the poultry industry. Emily is a natural developer of business relationships and embraces our passion of supplying functional ingredients that deliver performance and profitability," said Bill Achor, President and CEO of York Ag.

The poultry industry will be the focus of this new Territory Sales Representative, where York Ag commercializes proprietary and international brands for layers, pullets, broilers, turkeys, broiler breeders, and gamebirds whether conventional, ABF/NAE, or organic. "I am delighted to join the York Ag team. I am passionate about animal sciences and production and cannot wait to start building relationships in the poultry industry," said Emily Orth, Territory Sales Representative at York Ag.

York Ag believes Everyone Deserves a Nutritious Meal® and carries a wholesome portfolio of natural additives to address gut health, mitigation of stress, respiratory health, parasite challenges, litter quality, and overall animal enrichment and wellbeing.
